Warden I. A. Carr continues to make it warm for the poachers. For some time past he has been convinced that large quantities of game birds were being shipped from the Belgrade station. On Monday he visited the depot and setzed a box containing twenty-six patridges directed to Mayo Bros., Boston. Mr. Carr ascertained that the shipper was Hosea McGuire, of Rome, and, as it is unlawful to ship game out of the State, Mr. McGuire was arrested and brought before Judge weston ascentained $135 and cost, he pleading guilty. He will pay his fine. The birds had been shot by Rome hunters and sold to the game shipper.

many points about this new business!

Reporter. Mr. McGeorge, do you still regard Western mortgages with as much favor as before your last trip?

Answer. With the greater knowledge that I have acquired by this trip, and with the more thorough understanding of the subject, I have, if possible, a greater considence than ever in this class of securities. I regard them with favor for many reasons. First, because they provide such a convenient mode of investing money, both in small and large amounts. Second, because they pay a fair and living rate of interest, and allow those who have gone out of business and depend upon an income for their support, to obtain for their money the rate of interest which they expected and contemplated when they did retire, namely, six per cent. Third, and this is a very important reason to those depending upon incomes, because the interest is always obtainable the very day it is due. Fourth, because no care is required in looking after the investments when once made, the company employing its own agents to look after taxes, insurance and to collect interest and the principal when due, and being responsible to twice the amount of its whole capital stock, in addition to its large surplus fund, that this should be properly done. And, finally, I especially favor them because I believe they are the safest mode of investment I have had anything to do with.

Reporter. We have heard complaint made, Mr. McGeorge, that you are inclined to over-estimate the Lombard Investment Company, and that in seeking to obtain the confidence of the community for that company you are, perhaps, hardly just to other companies.

Answer. Perhaps I am open to this criticism. I certainly speak very highly of the Lombard Investment Company; but I do so because the more I learn of it, and the more I compare It with similar institutions, the stronger do my faith and confidence in it become. In the first place the president of the company commenced this business thirty-five years ago, and has followed it continuously ever since. Some of our principal examiners and appraisers, have been with us twenty years, many of them ten and ifficen years. They have, therefore, acquired an immense experituella are men thoroughly versed in their business, and while our company has now attained very large proportions and is doing an immense business, yet it has grown a gradually, and is to-day perfectly equipped for the performance of its work. Moreover, our company has an old record. It as sells and has sold for long years to an immense number of the most conservative institutions, in two instances to the amount of over $1,000,000 and $600,000 respectively, without the loss of a dollar of principal ext guarantee fund, (about $2,000,000,) to protect its investors. But there is still a reason above and beyond all these why I prefer the Lombard Company, and that is because there is so great a personal liability upon all of the 'stockholder's Each there is on the same as a stockholder is liable to double the amount of holder in a pational bank, and in this fnot I amount of the stockholders. Each the same as a stockholder in a pational bank, and in this fnot of his capital stock, the same as a stock holder in a national bank, and in this fac holder in a national bank, and in this later I can see the greatest protection to the investor. The company guarantee to pay both principal and interest in case of default, and as each stockholder is so heavily the company risks. them to know whereof they speak. Thus our company has for many years sold very largely to the savings banks of Vermout and New Hampshire. The Commissioner of Savings Banks for the latter State has for several years called attention to the greatly improved condition of these banks since they have been investing in these loans, and when one of our principal institutions of this character was making some investigation into this subject? I wrote to this commissioner requesting him to state his opinion about this class of securities, etc., etc. He wrote back a very long and careful letter, telling what his experience with the loans had been, but recommending that if our savings banks intended to invest, their officers should do as the officers of the New Hampshire Savings Bank Reporter. There is just one further question I would like to ask. Is not this western mortgage business being overdone, and is there not danger that money will be put out in the West improvidently, and the eastern investors come to grief?

Answer. I would answer yes and no. If money became very cheap and plentiful again and the Eastern lenders deal with irresponsible agents, or those lacking experience, he must expect trouble, and this the more surely if he be tempted by the offer of a fittle higher rate of interest to deal with the more reckless class of agents. · IT DEPENDS ON CIRCUMSTANCES. New York, Nov. 18. The World of this morning publishes the following: the ship Josephus, of Newcastle, Maine, the Rogers, arraved from Hong Kong the Boston and under the following at his residence, 122 Lexington a desired at a voyage of 149 days, and paborel late in the afternoon off Liberty bland. The Josephus lost her third mate and three camen during her voyage by get from a complication of diseases, principally kidney affection. His death was unexpected, it not being supposed outside his house that he was in any immediate danger. His son and daughter, his sister, his former law partice, Sherman W. Knewals, and his closest friend, Sufrogate Rollins, were at his bed-standing, Mr. Arthur's health had not improved during his stay in New York. Nov: 18. Ex-President Chester A. Arthur died at 5 o'clock this morning at his residence, 122 Lexington at his residence, 122 Lexington weeks ago and on his return, Oct. 1st, he was no better than when he left the city.

The Fatal Shock.

As time passed no permanent improvement came and the physicians feared some cut came and the physicians oreating nearly and could not rouse him.

All Hope in Vain.

The family answered his summons but failed to elicit any sign of consciousness or recognition from the ex-President. In alarm they summoned his physician, Dr. George A. Peters, who has been in attendance upon Mr. Arthur throughout his ill-ness and who responded promptly and at once saw that he was suffering from a stroke of crebral apoplexy. A small blood vessel in the brain had burst and paremeting was held at which he gave a sleph of its origin and growth. He will but toget toget a to-morrow.

Death Comes with the Merning.

Nellie, of whom Mr. Arthur was very fond, is fourteen years old.
Undertaker Davidson was summoned to take charge of the remains this morning. As soon as news of Mr. Arthur's death was made public many flags on public buildings were placed at half mast. Mr. Arthur had lived at 123 Lexington Avenue for twenty years or more. Sudden, but not Wholly Unexpected.

presided over the Riffel was at her wits' end to know where to accommodate all who asked that night for sleeping space. I myself was not a novice at climbing, having already spent several seasons in the Alpis, and for some years I had been a member of the Alpine Club. I had been up most of the great peaks around Zermatt, but I had not yet ascended the Lyskamm (14,889 feet), and it was for the purpose of doing the Lyskamm that I had come up to Riffel.

had come up to Riffel.

I was accompanied by a fellow-member of the Alpine Club named Buens, an admirable climber and a charming companion, and I had my guide Franz, who had been with me on most of my previous expeditions, and in whose steadiness and skill I had reason to have the greatest confidence. Franz was a man of forty or so, tall, and of splendid physique, with a good honest weather-beaten countenance, to which a long moustache gave a somewhat military appearance.

In intelligence he was greatly superior to the ordinary run of guides, for he could talk well upon other subjects besides the one topic of mountains.

Burns and I, being in some favor with the authorities at the Riffel, were fortunate in getting a room to ourselves; but a score or so of travelers, for whom no other or so of travelers, for whom no other space could be found, had to repose as best they could on the floor of the salon, so and lucky were they who could secure a mattress, for even mattresses gave out at not sorry when Franz's knock, soon after one o'clock, warned us that it was time to be up. This getting up is, I think, the most disagreeable part of an expedition.

I have a particular objection to dressing in a bad light, feeling all the 'while only half awake, and—but low be it spoken— i more than half disposed to envy those who are not leaving their beds at such an unearthly hour.

I dislike, too, the early breakfast—a melaucholy meat to be got over as expeditiously as possible; and on this point every one seems to be agreed, for at the kilfel, at all events; I have observed that it is usually despatched in solemn silence. The very look of the sleepy servant who brings in the coffee exercises a depressing influence, as well it may.

Then there is that getting into boots (for I am not one of those inconsiderate individuals who put theirs on up stairs and coine pounding down, to the detriment of sleep in those who do not happen to be getting up so early, and boots, to begin with, feel hard, it not absolutely uncomfortable.

But, after all, what, are these minor dis-

But, after all, what are these minor disagreeables beside the extraordinary amount of pleasure that is to be got out of climbing? They perhaps make it all the pleasurer, if we did but know it.

We were rather earlier than the majority, but there were two or three sleepy-looking individuals in the breakfast-room, evidently novices bound for Monte Rosa, giving one the idea by their appearance that they were already, beginning to think climbing with take rather than otherwise. It was close upon two clock—the liour Franz had named—when we got off, and we were soon on our way towards the former Glacier, The date was August 13, 187—.

Our narry had received an entities in Gorner Glacier, The date was August 13, 187.

Our party had received an addition in the shape of a porter whom Franz had engaged over-night—a big, good-natured-glocking fellow, and a very useful man to have, on a rope, as we found subsequently. The movining was splendid, and the stars shone down upon us from a cloudless sky, but still Franz seemed dissatisfied, and complained more than one of its feeling close. The atmosphere was certainly heavy, but as we neared the glacier-there came towards us a breath of cold air deliciously refreshing and inspiriting.

It was still dark when we reached the ics, but before we had crossed the glacier there anything to help me until I tried Dr. Losging and the stars of the day had commoneed to break, and be the day had commoneed to break and be the day had commoned to break and be the day to the day of the day of the day of the day had commoned to break and the stars and be the day of the da the day had commenced to break, and behind the giain mass of Monte Rosa and the Lyskamm there came over the heavens that pale unearthly hue which is seen at times when snow and sky intermingle. It was a superlatively fine morning, and, safe for a few safinon-colored clouds floiting the safe when the Webstehead clouds floiting the safe with the safe without it." Solid by druggists.

Shilloh's Cure will immediately relied for the safe with the safe without it. The safe without it without it without it. The saf above the Weissthor, the sky was perfect-above the Weissthor, the sky was perfectly clear.

We breakfasted near the well-known haiting-place for parties making the ascent of Monte Rosa, and soon afterwards we left that mountain on our left to keep on up the Grenz Glacief towards the summit of the Lasjoch. It seemed certain now that we should have a fine day, but Franz was clearly ill at ease, and grumbled constantly about the heat in the night, saying that he feared that we should find the Lyskamm arete in bad condition.

that, he feared that we should find the Lyskamm arete in bad condition.

His spirits, though, recovered somewhat as we got higher, and certainly the weather left little to be desired, fon a flood of golden sunlight spread over rock and snow, till even the hollow of the glacier in which we stood became bathed in the glorious light. Indeed, we could not have chosen a more perfect day for our expedition.

rious light. Indeed, we could not have chosen a more perfect day for our expedition.

We made rapid progress, for we were what is known as a "fast" party, and while it was still early we reached the foot of the terrible arete which rises straight up from the glacier till it culminates in the summit of the Lyskamm.

Tonny mind this arete constitutes one of the nastiest bits of climbing in the Alps. It is not difficult, but it is long, and almost its whole 'length dangerous. Its danger arises from the cornice, which in an immense mass hangs over on to the Italian side of the mountain. The actual ridge is so sharp and on either side the face of the cliff falls away so steeply to the glacier that the greatest care is necessary in order to keep on the ridge itself without trespassing upon the cornice; which, being formed of frozen snow only, is liable to crumble away at the slightest touch. So deceptive is a cornice of this description that even good guides are at a loss to distinguish sometimes between what is safe and what is not; while to a novice what may appear to be one broad smooth surface of snow may be safe to tread upon to the; width of a few inches.

It is this difficulty of telling where the firm ground ends and where the cornice begins that constitutes the danger of the Lyskamm arete. More than once it has led to inistakes on the part of guides, and it was such that caused one of the most awful tragedies that ever occurred to mountaineers—the fatal accident to mountaineers—the fatal accident to means.

Franz was ever celebrated for his enution, and on this day her constitutes the for his enution, and on this day her celebrated for his enution, and on this day her celebrated for his enution, and on this day her celebrated for his enu-phatically not an ascent to be recommended.

Franz was ever celebrated for his caution, and on this day he exercised even more tran his ordinary care. Not a step did he take without first testing the snow in front with the point of his ice axe, so as to make sure of what was ahead, and he never moved forward until quite convinced that it was safe to do so.

Thus our progress was slow, and it was not tillnearly eleven o'clock that we topped the final ridge and stood sogether upon the summit of the Lyskamm.

The view, exquisitely bright and clear as the sky was that day, was a marvellously beautiful one, but it is not within my province to describe it here, and, indeed, were I to make the attempt, I should fall to convey an idea of the impression it moved.

MARMIAGE, Visiting and Binshness Cards of the convey an idea of the impression it made apon me at the time. Besides, it was not for long that we were permitted to enjoy it, for Franz was all eagerness to be down the arete before it got much later. We were soon on the rope again. Franz led, then I came, then Burns, and the porter—an admirable man for the purpose, on account of his weight and strength—brought—brought up the rear. It was in this order that we commenced the descent. All went well at first. Each man was careful to use the rone as the rone ought.

"And why don't you like the Lyskamm, Franz?"

"Herr, there is a fearful cornice there this year."

"We'll take our chance of that. We can't tell what it's like till we try, and if we find it too bad; we can always turn back. When must we start?"

It will be time if we leave here at two."

"Good! Then you'll call us about one. Guten Abend, Herr; schlafen sic wohl."

"Buten Abend, Herr; schlafen sic wohl."

The above conversation took place one exquisite August evening outside the old. Riffel Hotel. Table d'hote was over, and the usual assemblage of climbers, guides, and others was there, watching the decilling light of a most glorious sunset fading slowly awf's from the mighty precipices of the Matterhorn, and from the grandest runge in all the Alps.

The season up to that time had not been a good one, and but little elimbing had been done; but, with the prospect of fine weather, of which that morning had given unmisfakable promise, every one took heart and the number of expeditions that were at once planned for the following day was something astonishing.

Every available guide was "booked," and the courteous lady who at that time presided over the Riffel was at her wits' end to know where to accommodate all who asked that night for sleeping space. In yeself was not a novice at climbing, having already spent several seasons in the that were a recommodate all who asked that night for sleeping space.
